

SLOTHOWER LOST 41 VOTES IN RECOUNT OF BALLOTS

REVOLTS MAY KEEP HOUSE BUSY AWHILE

Majority of Members Insist Legislation Follow Rules

Springfield, Ill., June 10.—(AP)—Five Chicago traction bills passed by the Senate, were referred to the House committee on municipalities this afternoon.

Springfield, Ill., June 10.—(AP)—Threat of prolonging the session of the House of Representatives indefinitely hung over the heads of members today when that body voted to comply with established rules in calling bills on the calendar.

Unless members forcing the action recede from their position and allow pending legislation to be called up in order of its importance, the end of the session may be weeks instead of days away. It had been planned for the closing gavel to fall Saturday, June 18, if possible. In view of similar situations arising at previous sessions, veteran members predict that the uprising will be short lived.

Alleged failure of Speaker Scholes to call a bill yesterday in the order settled upon by the "steering" committee, brought Representative Michael Fahey, Toledo, to his feet in protest when a bill legalizing the building of a hard road in LaSalle County was called for passage this morning. He insisted that the calendar be advanced in the order prescribed by the rules, and Representative Michael Igoe, Chicago, came to his defense.

Suspension Defeated
A motion to suspend the rules to call the LaSalle county bill lost 64 to 38, and the speaker went back to house bills on first reading and then to those on second. These disposed of the House entered upon the list of more than one hundred bills on third reading.

The rules further provide with reference to senate bills that these be called in the order of third, second and first reading, respectively. If the rule now prevailing continues the Barr traction bills now on first reading will be reached some time in the dim and distant future. A hundred house bills on third reading, thirty-five senate bills on second reading and a hundred senate bills on first reading must be waded through before the Barr bills can be referred to committee or advanced by the House.

Charged With Driving Auto Without Consent
Dale "Duck" Lambert and Richard Long of this city, were held under bonds of $2,000 each by Judge William L. Leach in the county court this morning on informations charging both with the driving of a motor vehicle without the consent of the owner. The two men were arrested about midnight Wednesday when they were found east of the city on the Lincoln Highway with a Ford coupe belonging to Dan Vicks of Woodstock. The owner of the car signed the information this morning and in default of the bonds, both were returned to the county jail.

Heavy Penalty Asked for Fakers in Sports
Chicago, June 10.—(AP)—Six months to a year in jail or a fine not exceeding $200 or both in prospect today for fakers of pre-arranged athletic events staged in Illinois.

By a vote of 108 to 8 the House of Representatives at Springfield passed the bill sponsored by Representative Thomas J. O'Grady of Chicago fixing penalties for those found guilty of taking.

"The bill is aimed chiefly at boxing, wrestling and baseball," Representative O'Grady explained.

The measure now goes to the senate.

De Autremont Twins Plead "Not Guilty"
Steuvenburg, O., June 10.—(AP)—Ray and Roy De Autremont, 27-year-old twins who for four years were the object of a world wide search, pleaded not guilty on arraignment before a United States commissioner here today on a charge of robbing a mail train in Oregon.

Bonds were set at $50,000 each and they were remanded to jail to await transportation to Columbus. From there they will go to Jacksonville, Oregon, for trial following the arrival of federal officers from Oregon.

Lee County Bankers in Meeting Here Thursday
The members of the Lee County Bankers' association will meet this evening at the Nachusa Tavern. A business session is to be held this afternoon to be followed by the regular monthly banquet at 6:30.

CONTEST IS COMPLETED THURSDAY

Schumm, Miller Top Former Commissioner in Recount

The recounting of the ballots in the April municipal election was completed in the county court yesterday and the contest brought by William V. Slothower resulted in his defeat. The official figures in the recent recount were as follows:

	Recount	Official
First Precinct—
Miller	331	329
Schumm	308	301
Slothower	320	318
Second Precinct—
Miller	295	291
Schumm	267	266
Slothower	275	275
Third Precinct—
Miller	139	143
Schumm	180	185
Slothower	132	134
Fourth Precinct—
Miller	244	247
Schumm	275	277
Slothower	285	303
Fifth Precinct—
Miller	281	288
Schumm	263	264
Slothower	244	262
Sixth Precinct—
Miller	249	258
Schumm	259	265
Slothower	242	247
TOTALS
Miller	1539	1556
Schumm	1552	1568
Slothower	1498	1539

Some Votes Lost
The canvass showed the following number of ballots lost in the various precincts for the reason that the judges failed to mark their initials on the back of the ballots:

Pct.	Miller	Schumm	Slothower
1.	3	3	2
2.	1	3	3
3.	0	0	0
4.	2	4	5
5.	9	7	5
6.	6	1	5
Total	21	18	20

The award of the questioned ballots for the three candidates by precincts was as follows:

	Questioned	Miller	Schumm	Slothower
1st.	30	3	12	11
2nd.	24	11	13	10
3rd.	17	3	12	2
4th.	20	7	7	6
5th.	18	6	6	6
6th.	20	6	6	8
Totals	129	53	63	44

In the first precinct five ballots were thrown out because voters attempted to vote for five candidates for commissioner instead of four. The same condition was found to prevail in other of the city precincts. In one precinct one voter had marked his ballot for all six candidates for commissioner. One supporter of Mayor Palmer voted for him, but invalidated the entire ballot by writing on the back, "Hurrah for Brooks."

Another elector who was surprised to learn that his entire ballot was thrown out because near one name on the ballot he had placed a square, and a cross within it and then wrote, "A yellow dog."

Several Thrown Out.
Numerous attempted votes for individual candidates were held void because the electors had failed to make proper marks; other than an "X" was used; or the two bars of the "X" did not cross within the square. Another voter ignored the squares entirely and placed the "X" after the names of his favored candidates, but his energy was wasted and his vote lost. Some attempted to vote by using check marks and other character than the "X" and these ballots were not counted.

The contest brought out many interesting phases of the election laws and the recount was carefully handled. City Clerk Blake C. Grover, who was appointed custodian of the ballots by Judge Leach, submitted each ballot separately to the three attorneys, after which the unquestioned ballots were called to the checkers, Mrs. Henry Leydig, Charles Leake and Rae Arnold. Attorney John Armstrong appeared for William V. Slothower, defeated candidate, Attorney George C. Dixon represented Commissioner Charles E. Miller and Attorney Sherwood Dixon appeared for Commissioner Louis Schumm, whose count was also attacked in the contest.

CORN PRICES IN BIG TUMBLE ON BOARD AT NOON

Avalanche of Selling Orders Forced it Down Six Cents

Chicago, June 10.—(AP)—Corn tumbled down nearly 6 cents a bushel today in some cases. The July delivery at one time touched as low as 93 1-4c, compared with 98 7-8c at yesterday's finish. The big drop was ascribed chiefly to rapid progress which is now being made in corn planting.

Holders of contracts for future deliveries of corn attempted today to sell out at an early bulge in the corn market that resulted from a upward swing of wheat prices. Selling of corn however, soon became so energetic that the corn market gave way and numerous selling orders to stop losses at various fixed limits were forced into operation.

In some quarters today predictions were current that notwithstanding the unusually low price this year for corn the final average season for last equal 1926 and that with good growing weather and timely rains it is yet possible to raise a crop of 3,000,000,000 bushels or more.

"LINDY" NEARS RECEPTION BY HIS PRESIDENT

Contract with Memphis Made by Planes and U. S. Destroyer

PUT FLAGS OUT

Secretary, Henry. Hellener of the Chamber of Commerce today requested that all merchants display flags tomorrow in honor of the return of Colonel Charles Lindbergh from his Paris flight. A large number of telegrams were dispatched from Dixon today and several letters have been sent by aerial mail to the aviator.

Washington, June 10.—(AP)—Washington is prepared to honor tomorrow with one of its greatest welcoming ceremonies in history the heroic New York-Paris flyer, Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh.

The first taste of the admiration of the American people for his epic flight, however, was to be given the 25 year old pilot late today when the navy dirigible Los Angeles and sixty army and navy airplanes together with a convoy of six destroyers were on their way to meet the cruiser Memphis as she rounded Virginia Capes. The cruiser was scheduled to pass the capes at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

Meanwhile a proud mother, Mrs. Evangeline Lindbergh, a Detroit school teacher was anxiously awaiting the triumphant return of her son. Mrs. Lindbergh quietly left Detroit yesterday by train and was expected to arrive here today.

Many Planes in Escort
Tomorrow approximately 90 army, navy, commerce and postoffice department airplanes together with more than a score of civilian planes will escort the aviator to the Washington Navy Yard dock where he will disembark.

The national capital alone is to give America's official welcome to Col. Lindbergh, it has been decided.

The trans-Atlantic flyer will receive no welcoming or greeting until President Coolidge and government officials, diplomats and fellow famous aviators extend their tributes.

The dropping of a package of messages and his Missouri National Guard uniform with the new spread eagles of Colonelcy which he will don for his reception tomorrow, from the dirigible Los Angeles, on the Memphis' decks, were to feature his only contact with his homeland today.

Mother With Coolidge
Mrs. Evangeline Lindbergh, mother of the flyer, broke her long journey from Detroit to Washington today at Baltimore and will be brought here from that city this afternoon in a White House automobile. Mrs. Lindbergh will be the guest here of Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge at the temporary White House on Du Pont Circle.

The President is sending one of his aides to Baltimore to meet Mrs. Lindbergh, who went to a hotel there after leaving the train.

The cruiser Memphis with Charles A. Lindbergh aboard was 176 nautical miles off the Virginia Capes at 8 o'clock this morning and was making 22 knots an hour, Vice Admiral Burge informed the navy department.

MET BY DESTROYER

U. S. S. Memphis, June 10.—(AP)—(By Wireless to the Associated Press)—The first home contact for Colonel Charles Lindbergh, New York to Paris flyer, occurred at 6:06 a. m. today when the destroyer Humphreys met the scout cruiser Memphis about 250 miles off the coast. The destroyer took aboard movie films made of the aviator during the voyage and a bag of official mail which she will carry to New York.

Colonel Lindbergh is regarded as a "real good guy" by the members of the engineer's force with whom he had "chow." The young aviator was perfectly at ease and the men were equally at home at the plain board table, chatting like a lot of boys on a holiday.

Had Lots of Fun

"Well, there were no formalities to speak of," said Roxford Couch, engineer, talking of the meal to the correspondent of The Associated Press. "Lindy just walked down the passageway escorted by a lieutenant who introduced us all around and the fun began. He seemed to be familiar with all the sea terms regarding chow."

Honolulu, Here They Come!

With Pilot Augie Peddler, she plans to fly from Flint to San Francisco to Honolulu in a giant monoplane. Peddler and Lieut. Eyer Sloniger, a friend of Lindbergh's, flipped a coin to see who should make the hop, which is being backed by William Malloska, wealthy oil man. Miss Doran is learning to be a pilot and has had considerable flying experience.

WOMAN WHO ONCE RAN FOR PRESIDENCY IS CALLED

Victoria W. Martin is Dead at Her Home in England

Cheltenham, Eng., June 10.—(AP)—Victoria Clavin Woodhull Martin, author and pioneer suffragist, who once ran for president of the United States, died here today.

Mrs. Martin, a native born American and once a candidate for the presidency, had resided in England since her marriage to John Bidolph Martin, a noted banker and philanthropist. In her adopted country she carried on her work in behalf of woman's suffrage which she began here and which made her known throughout the United States, and in addition was one of the most active workers in England for the promotion of friendly relations between that country and America.

Born at Homer, Ohio, Sept. 23, 1838, Mrs. Martin was the daughter of Reuben and Roxanna Clavin. As a young woman she engaged in the banking business for a short time in New York and also was editor of Woodhull and Claflin's Weekly. Early in life she became an ardent advocate of woman's suffrage and her lectures favoring the movement took her to all parts of the United States. She also lectured on the scientific and religious improvement of the human race and was the author of a number of works dealing with the two subjects.

Became Candidate
Mrs. Martin memorialized Congress in behalf of woman's suffrage in 1870 and two years later was a candidate for President of the United States, having been nominated by the Equal Rights Party. She was the organizer of various conventions for the discussion of social reform and had carried on propaganda work in the inter-continental working classes both in the United States and Europe for more than 30 years.

After the death of her first husband, Dr. Canning Woodhull, in 1873, Mrs. Martin went to Europe for a speaking tour. It was at one of her lectures at Old St. James Hall that she met Mr. Martin, and their marriage followed. He died in 1897. Since then Mrs. Martin had devoted much of her time and had spent liberally of her fortune in all projects to cement the friendship between her native and adopted countries.

In Patriotic Move

Mrs. Martin was a moving spirit in the purchase of Sulgrave Manor, the home of George Washington's ancestors and was a generous contributor to the fund raised for its purchase. In recent years, especially since the granting of woman's suffrage both in the United States and England, she had ceased many of her activities and lived in almost complete retirement.

Her gifts in 1922 of an ancient English manor to the British Sulgrave Institution brought Mrs. Martin before the public again, the occasion being taken by newspapers on both sides of the Atlantic of her active life. The manor, given by Mrs. Martin in recognition of the success attending the efforts to promote Anglo-American friendship, was built in 1531 and is located on the Avon about 49 miles from London.

OLD MASTERS

"What is the real good?"
I asked in musing mood.

Order, said the law court;
Knowledge, said the school;
Truth, said the wise man;
Pleasure, said the fool;
Love, said the maiden;
Beauty, said the page;
Freedom, said the dreamer;
Home, said the sage;
Fame, said the soldier;
Equity, said the seer.

Spoke my heart full sadly,
"The answer is not here."

Then within my bosom,
Softly this I heard:
"Each heart holds the secret;
Kindness is the word."
—John Boyle O'Reilly: "What Is Good."

Mrs. Felton said she had "made the trip" to her advanced age by taking "one step at a time" and "praying to God to keep me in safe paths."

Hardwick, former governor of Georgia who appointed the pioneer civic leader to the U. S. Senate for one day following the death of Senator Thomas B. Watson.

The WOMAN'S DAY by ALLENE SUMNER

Because he stood right up in meeting and said that the really only loved and desirable women were those who knew how to be playthings for men and who knew just when men wanted playthings, Roland Pertwee, English author, is in hot water today. Thousands of madder-than-wet-hen females have pounced upon him, and the papers are full of their venom. "When the discovery is made that woman is a human being with a purpose of her own in life," one irate female wrote, "Mr. Pertwee will be forced to stop looking for an impossible combination of a baby's rattle, a frisky kitten and a darning and button-applying machine."

Whether the girls are glad or mad, Mr. Pertwee, who naturally knows the likes and dislikes of his own sex better than any woman could know them, is right, methinks. Of course, it's maddening, but that doesn't alter facts as to what they want. The only feminine comeback is "Try and get it!"

UNMODERN FAINT
Here's wagging that if any woman was ever riled it was Mrs. Medill McCormick, National Republican committeewoman from Illinois, daughter of the late U. S. Senator Mark Hanna, when she fainted while making a political speech before some 800 women in New York. Perhaps not long before she fainted this perfect example of the modern feminist had razed the maiden of 1900 who thought it seemly to faint upon slightest provocation. Perhaps she had razed the male viewpoint which denies that a woman can stand everything a man can. No, one can think of few more embarrassing things than for a Ruth McCormick to faint in public.

HAIRY SKULL CAPS
Fashion note. Skull caps covered with false hair cut and combed in a modish manner. The hair is not really "false." It is human hair. What I mean is that it never grew on the head of the gal who wears the half-trimmed skull cap for sports wear, bathing, et al. The cap keeps one's own hair out of the eyes when playing tennis, and keeps the own hair dry when swimming.

THAT WOMAN VOTE
Japanese women want suffrage, too. And the arguments as to why they should not have it seem screamingly funny, even though the very same ones were prattled aloud in this country about ten years ago. The government says: "Fearing that if housewives were given the right to vote it might result in domestic discord, consequently the government in its desire to insure the maintenance of harmony between man and wife considers it undesirable to extend the franchise to women." Let's see, how many homes of America have been "disrupted" because mother votes?

AS IF THEY COULD!
Thousands of orthodox Jews signed a petition demanding that rabbis refuse to perform marriage ceremonies for women with short skirts, bobbed hair, and rouge upon their cheeks. Husbands and fathers of such women should be excluded by the rabbis from the synagogues, said the petition. Poor old souls in their darkness, still believing that husbands and fathers have any control over erring daughters, even when they err!

Y. P. M. C. TO MEET MONDAY EVENING

The Young Peoples Missionary Circle of the Grace Evangelical church will meet next Monday evening to hold its regular monthly meeting. Picnic supper at 6:45 with the meeting following. Every member is urged to be present.

Miss Welch's Talk Was Well Received

Miss Emeline Welch, returned missionary from China, gave a very interesting message on the work and conditions there, to a large and appreciative audience at the Grace Evangelical church last Wednesday evening. Miss Welch, formerly of the Eldena Church, has spent several years on the mission field and expects to take up missionary work in Kentucky also under the Board of the Evangelical Church.

A very interesting letter was sent out by George B. Davis of the Bible House of Shanghai telling of the persecution and revival in China. A large part of China is in the grip of intense anti-Christian agitation which has resulted in widespread and severe persecution of the Christians. The sufferings of the Christians recall vividly the trials endured by the followers of Christ in the early days of the Christian Church in Jerusalem. Some of the believers in China have been imprisoned; some have been paraded through the streets; others have been beaten and fined and in others the church furnishings have been smashed. Bible and hymn books have been taken out and publicly burned. Some of the slogans of the movement are: "Down with Christianity"; "Down with the Christians"; "Down with the Bible." In some cases the churches have received a setback; but in others the persecution has been turned into glorious victory by the courage and faith of the Christians. Reports have been received from various Christian workers of the revival flame that has been kindled in China. Dr. J. E. Shoemaker of Yuzuo, Chekiang Province, who has been a missionary in China for more than 30 years said: "I feel it is providential that this distribution of New Testaments has come just in time when in so many places in China public preaching is prohibited, and churches are confiscated. It gives the workers something they can do. This is good for their own spiritual life, as well as for the salvation of others. The breaking down of their own old religions, and the uncertainties of the present situation, is producing a state of mind that is very favorable to the reception of new religious ideas. I was very pleased to have one of our country evangelists report that the twelve testaments given him had been willingly received, and the people were quite ready to put down their names on cards agreeing to read and carry the books daily. It is the spiritual warfare that is sweeping China at this time; and the power that can win the victory must be spiritual. Therefore the best service we can render will be on our knees, in closets and in prayer groups. It is not the mere formal prayer that is needed, but believing intercession. There is cumulative power in united prayer that cannot be measured; and wins victories in spite of seeming impossible barriers."

SANDWICHES FOR PICNICS—BY SISTER MARY NEA Service Writer

With the picnic season upon us perhaps a few sandwich suggestions will not be amiss. The right sort of sandwiches and fruit can be made to serve as an adequate and nourishing luncheon for a day's motoring or boating, hiking or in the saddle.
To begin with, here are few sandwich "don'ts."
DON'T try to use too fresh bread; at least twelve hours and better twenty-four should elapse after baking.
DON'T try to cut sandwich bread with a dull knife.
DON'T try to spread butter without first creaming it.
DON'T use a filling that may separate or become "runny."
DON'T use a filling that is dry, tough or tasteless.

Some Are Handy
There are certain kinds of sandwiches that will endure several hours of packing and jolting and heat and still be palatable while others are ruined after an hour's standing. Meat sandwiches, plain cheese, olive and nut and a few other varieties are "hardy" and will stand much. But tomato and cucumber and most lettuce sandwiches, delicious as they are are best served on the porch or in the garden.

THE OLD FASHION WAS—TO BE AS NEW-FASHIONED—AS A JUNE BRIDE COULD POSSIBLY BE

A thin coating of butter should always be spread on both sides of a sandwich. The butter prevents the bread from absorbing the filling and adds much to the tastiness of the whole. Of course when a highly seasoned sandwich butter takes the place of a filling, other butter is not needed.

Exclude Them!
Two crisp lettuce leaves, one on each side of bread after buttering, prevents the bread from "soaking" and furnishes the bit of green vegetable so necessary.

Highly flavored sandwiches such as onion or fish, should be packed alone in a container entirely separate from the others.

One-third cup of butter creamed will spread about twelve sandwiches. This means twenty-four slices of bread. To cream the butter let it stand at room temperature until it has lost its hardness, then with a fork, wooden spoon or knife work until soft and creamy.

THE NEW FASHION IS—TO BE AS OLD-FASHIONED—AS THAT JUNE BRIDE OF LONG AGO!

PAY FOR MOTHERHOOD.

The British national conference of labor women, assembled in high convocation at Huddersfield, England, has gone on record to the effect that motherhood is "the last relic of slavery." Mothers, attest the lady delegates, receive no wages for their work.

When a certain American millionaire was married not long ago, a contract was drawn up that the wife was to receive some few thousands or tens of thousands of dollars for each child borne. Were the world made up of millionaires, it is of course possible that the labor of motherhood might be recompensed at something akin to its true worth. Not all of us being millionaires, however, it is but natural to wonder how the English ladies plan to fix the wage scale in order to emancipate the slaves. It is to be wondered, too, if womanhood as a whole would put a stamp of approval on any hard and fast cash remuneration for the labor of love that is really its greatest privilege.

THE NEXT WORLD WAR.

If mankind has any one enemy that causes him a maximum of trouble, it is the baleful bug—the indefatigable insect. Fire is a terror, flood is a horror, storm in a menace. War takes its awful toll and crime counts its victims by scores and hundreds, yet they all pale into insignificance under the ravages of the boll weevil, the corn borer, the gypsy moth, the Japanese beetle and their kith and kin. If there is ever another World War, it should be a war against bugs.

THE TINYMITES

STORY BY HAL COCHRAN—PICTURES BY KNICK

The bunch of Tines up on land of course could not quite understand why Scouty stayed away so long. It worried them a lot. Said Clowny. "He was foolish, quite, to dive right in, and out of sight. By now some monster of the sea has caught him, like as not."

Then Conny answered. "That can't be, for old King Roar rules o'er the sea. I'm sure he wouldn't let a thing take Scouty by surprise. I'm satisfied he's safe down there, but think he should come up for air. But, let's not fret, for he can do it, if he really tries."

"Let's go out on the dock," said one, "just sitting here is far from fun." So, up they jumped and off they ran and reached the dock right quick. "Oh, my, I wish we had a boat," said Conny. "I would be fun to float around upon the water, for it's looking pretty slick."

Just then the water by the dock swished round a bit and made it rock. The Tines all jumped in surprise. Said one, "What made that swish? I wish that old King Roar were here. I know he'd drive away all fear." And, much to all the crowd's surprise, he promptly got his wish.

"'Twas old King Roar who popped in sight, out of the stream with all his might. 'Hello there, Tinymites,' he said. 'Did someone call for me? Perhaps you think that something's wrong and wonder where wee Scouty's gone. Well, there's no need to worry. He's as safe as he can be.'"

Said Conny. "We would like to know what's going on there, down below." "All right, I'll tell you," said the King. "Sit down, and all be still." And then he told of Scouty's fun, and all the things that he had done. The Tines listened closely, and it gave them quite a thrill.

An EX-Buck PRIVATE goes back to FRANCE by PAUL ADAMS

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is Chapter 57 of the series of articles written by a correspondent for The Telegraph who is revisiting France.

CHAPTER LVII

It is impossible to draw a word-picture of the desolation—that desolation of the Champagne out of Reims—for it is a desolation that may be felt but not described.

Through this shell-blasted terrain the French have built a road over which the motors of tourists and the buses of the travel companies chug as the guides point out places of interest.

Fort de Pompelle is over on the heights to the left. Then comes the village of Beine. After Beine—the Champagne. Lines of trenches, the walls caved in. Deep shell-holes to right and left. Splintered trees, blackened and dead.

Nauvoo—once a village of 300 inhabitants. A few stones remain. Moronvilliers—completely destroyed.

Still Is Desolate

Here was the heart of No-Man's Land. The glib chauffeur declares that on a certain day in 1915 the German and French artillerymen fired a total of 285,000 shells in eight hours. The chauffeur could easily be correct. For all is ruin—all is destruction—plainly discernable after these eleven years.

The chauffeur pauses and shuts off his engine. The silence even at mid-day, is complete. Not even the sheep or a bird to break it. Grass-grown trenches, shell-holes, dugouts, the war-blasted line of the Champagne.

In all the journey not a single human being was seen. Not from Meine on for almost 25 kilometers. Not one. The first person to come in

SAINT and SINNER

They drove the four blocks to the parsonage of the little neighborhood church in silence. Faith was grateful to Bob for that little breathing spell of silence, for she felt that she would have burst into tears if he had talked casually. She wanted to hold tight to that sense of peace, the feeling that she had been blessed as she knelt beside her bed, crying out to God and to her mother.

The preacher, the Rev. Mr. Kinney, a gaunt old man peering at them through thick glasses and smiling with real kindness, met them at the door and ushered them, with little flurries of cheerful conversation, into the shabby parsonage parlor. There his wife, a little round dumpling of a woman, was waiting for them. Their granddaughter, a plain girl with thin, nervous hands and hungry, envious eyes, was the other witness.

Bob talked easily. Dear Bob! How tall and splendid he was, how charged with life in this room that seemed people with shadows. Behind his kindness and his professional cheerfulness, the old preacher looked utterly tired, defeated, through with life. Faith wondered if he still loved his little old wife. Could love last that long? Would Bob always look at her with gladness and passion leaping in his eyes?

"Dear Bob!"

She was standing beside Bob, the preacher was reading from his worn prayer-book, his voice intoning the service which he had read over so many, many couples—

"Robert, do you take this woman to be your lawful wedded wife, to love and to cherish until death do you part?"

Bob's voice rang out confidently: "I do."

"Faith, do you take this man to be your lawful wedded husband, to love, honor and obey, to cling to in sickness and in health, for better or for worse?"

She tried to speak as Bob had spoken, gladly, confidently, but the words stuck in her throat. She felt Bob's fingers close over her cold right hand, as if to give her courage. "I do." The words were little more than a whisper.

Bob was putting the platinum wedding ring on her finger. His hand felt cold and moist as it fumbled the shining loop along her trembling finger. Why, Bob was nervous, too! She realized suddenly, and she looked up at him a tremulous smile playing over her face, her eyes wide with love and tender amusement.

When it was over and their union had been blessed by a quivering prayer, they lingered a while, saying the usual things in strained, queer voices. The plain granddaughter, with the thin, twisting, nervous hands, raised on tiptoe, suddenly, and kissed Bob on the lips, as if she were impelled by something stronger than herself. The preacher's salute still felt damp on Faith's cheek. She had wanted to remember only Bob's kiss, given her at the conclusion of the ceremony. She wanted to realize that this man who was shaking hands and saying conventional things was her husband—her husband! She repeated the word. It seemed to have no meaning. What an odd word it was—husband!

"Yes, my wife and I are going to our new home in Enfield," Bob was saying to old Mr. Kinney.

"Ready, dear? The family will be

OUR BOARDING HOUSE

BY AHERNS

CIVIC ACHIEVEMENTS

BY DON E. MOWRY
Secretary, the American Community Advertising Association

A number of cities have found that they were particularly suited for some industry which they had never considered as likely to come to their locality.

Grand Forks, N. D., for example, found out that it was a potential sugarcane center. At the time of the discovery there was hardly a sugar beet grown in the Grand Forks territory.

A small plot of beets was planted in the Red River valley to test the suitability of the soil for the crop. The yield was good. The planting was increased till there were 3000 acres of sugar beets under cultivation.

The next step in the plan to make Grand Forks a sugar center involved the building of a refinery, which was to cost $1,500,000. Local capital raised $400,000.

At this stage of development the American Beet Sugar Company, after thorough investigation, decided that it wanted to enter the valley, and took over the interests of the local company, returning in full the payments of each stockholder.

It is expected that within a few years several more factories will be erected, and that the beet sugar industry will be a dominant factor in the prosperity of the valley of which Grand Forks is the center.

GOLDIE B., KNOWN ON MANY TRACKS
WILL BE RETIRED

Polo Owner of Speedy Mare Decides She's Earned a Rest

POLO—A romantic past behind her, a past of which few in the world can boast, Goldie B., sorrel mare, worker first, then an equine heroine of the track, finally a family driver in a day when "drivers" are no longer an object of pride in the general day's run of gentlemen, retires. Goldie B., as sleek and forward-looking as a four-year-old, has ended her track career unless her owner, Mrs. Roy Beck of Polo, decides to race her. But the chances are that Goldie B., 2:06 1/4, will have nothing to look forward to, now, except an easy life at the hands of her life-long partner, her partner who refused to part with her when she was at her height for a cash consideration of $2,000. Roy Beck, even though she is now owned by Mrs. Beck, Mr. Beck has been the one who trotted along with Goldie B. through the years, on a hundred different tracks and through numberless heats, 95 percent of which she could have won.

"Discovered" in Field
It was back some 10 years ago when Goldie B. was 3 years old that her mettle as a racer was discovered. She had ancestry, of course, but she did her work in the fields along with the drafters until she was "of age" for a horse. Homer Mulnix asked Beck to drive with him for practice, one day. That was on the "Hugie half mile" of dirt and Goldie won three heats with ease. Then Beck took her to the Dixon track with Billy Wiener and one of his horses. Goldie B. her first time in racing harness and cart, made the half in 1:06. Then folks began to take notice.

Mr. Beck used to drive her from Polo to Sterling, race her there at the old Mineral Springs track, then back again at night. And she like it. When Goldie B. was booked to a sulky she felt like a kid with a new pair of shoes. A natural born "free legger" she came near ruin when a trainer tried to hobble her. She went lame. She got "sore" up until she couldn't win a heat in 2:30. But Goldie came back.

Broke Record at 17
Last year in Oregon, Goldie broke the track record—at the age of 17. She made the mile on a half mile track in the 2:14 pace at 2:10 flat and the timers hung her at 2:11 1/4. She won the 2:10 pace at Amboy last season in 2:09 1/4. Goldie B. was out of the money only once last season and she raced on eight tracks. Her driver was C. E. Elliott, of Amboy, a brother of Bert Elliott, of Polo, the best driver she ever had. Goldie is training 12 head this spring and has been wanting Goldie B. again, but the old mare's racing days are over. A lot every day, plenty of lucious grass and her day is full.
Goldie's mother was Belle Swartz, who had three colts, the slowest of which had a record of 2:17. Her sire was Delham, 2:13 1/4.

Opening of Compton Gun Club on Sunday

The entertainment committee of the Compton Gun club have announced the formal opening of their new grounds Sunday afternoon, the program beginning promptly at 12 o'clock. The new club grounds are located two and one-half miles southwest of Compton on the Meridian Highway, opposite the George Kramm farm residence. The formal opening was scheduled to have taken place Memorial day, but owing to the inclemency of the weather was postponed. The program calls for a 100 bird jack rabbit event starting at 1 o'clock which is to feature the program. The committee in charge consists of Leslie M. Corwin, Henry H. "Hank" Chaon and Ralph Carnahan.

Cab Makers Lost to Shoe Makers, 13-6

The American Cab & Body company's team of the Twilight League met defeat again last evening at the hands of the Brown Shoe company's revamped team, the final score being 13 to 6. The shoe makers started out on a hitting tirade but Eddie Coffey remained on the mound for the cab manufacturers throughout the game. Smith, a port sider for the shoe makers, was driven from the mound in the fourth inning. Jack Cowley of the cab makers, who is developing into a fence buster, sent out another spectacular home run his first time to bat and with the bases unoccupied.

Levine and Chamberlin Plan Continued Service

Berlin—Charles Levine declared today that he and Clarence Chamberlin planned a regular Trans-Atlantic aerial service, using multi-motored machines capable of carrying 2,000 pounds each. Levine stated that he was ready to put $2,000,000 into the scheme and that both he and Chamberlin thought it could become operative within a year.

OAKMONT COURSE ONE OF HARDEST IN THE COUNTRY

Scene of National Open Tourney Also One of Best Maintained

Pittsburgh—(AP)—Conceded by experts to be one of the most difficult, as well as one of the best maintained golf courses in the world, the links of the Oakmont Country Club, among the rolling hills of Allegheny County some 12 miles from Pittsburgh, will test the ability of leading golfers of the United States and Europe who have entered the National Open, June 14, 15 and 16.

In addition to scores of natural hazards and rough, the course contains, by exact count, 133 sand and pit traps and bunkers. The fairways are well protected by bunkers and traps, while the greens, said to be among the best in the world, are trapped, fore and aft, as well as on the flanks.

Leading golfers including the one and only Bobby Jones, who has won a number of titles at Oakmont, have placed their stamp of approval on the course as a real test of any golfer's ability.

The 18-hole course measures 6,965 yards, and the par is 82.

Following is a detailed description of the links:

Hole 1—342 yards, par 5. Requires drive, long iron, chip and two putts. The fairway slopes from the tee about half way to the green and then comes 250 yards of a sharp decline to the putting grounds. A long line of traps and a series of bunkers flank the fairway to the left, while a dozen traps and bunkers, as well as a dozen run along to the right. A roadway to the right makes the out-of-bounds line close to the fairway. The green is guarded by two traps on each side. The green is like an upturned saucer, proving most difficult to a majority of players. To the rear of the green is a gully, and an overplayed second shot means trouble.

Hole 2—363 yards, par 4. Drive, mashie and two putts. The fairway slopes gently to the green, which is trapped on both sides, and in the rear with deep sand pits. Four traps and three large bunkers slant into the middle of the fairway from the right. A deep sand trap in mid-fairway catches short drives. On the left a ditch, together with small bunkers and rough, run the length of the hole. In all, seven traps protect the green, which slopes toward the approach with a slight roll to the center.

Hole 3—428 yards, par 4. Regulation calls for a drive, long iron and two putts. The tee is elevated, but the flag cannot be seen by the driver. The fairway runs level a short distance, then rises abruptly, then falls slightly to the green. Rough flanks the right, while a long series of sand-trap bunkers dot the left. Sand pits and mounds mar the scenery nearer the hole. The green, comparatively level in the center, slopes off on the edges. An overapproach finds the rough, or a slight hollow lands one in the woods, a hollow or a ditch.

Hole 4—536 yards, par 5. Drive, brassie, pitch and two putts. This is a dog-leg hole, and despite the elevated tee, the flag is not visible. The drive carries over a straight fairway, or to the joint of the dog-leg. The player then has his choice—a brassie over a hill on the blind, with the chance of finding one of many ditches and traps, or a straight away so as to take the third shot within sight of the green. The over-the-hill shot is menaced by 10 bunkers and 12 traps. The green is rather small, but level, and is surrounded by six traps.

Hole 5—354 yards, par 4. Drive, pitch and two putts. For 250 yards the fairway runs slightly uphill, then drops more severely to a mire of ditches and heavy rough in the fore of the green. Traps and bunkers line the left, as does a big T-shaped ditch. A disastrous ditch, with its companion bunkers, flank the right. The green is large with a gentle fore slope. It is flanked on the right by a long sand trap with two traps and bunkers on the left.

Hole 6—187 yards, par 3. This hole has unmade many a golfer. The tee and the green are elevated, with a deep hollow in between. The sure-shot uses an iron with a backspin to reach the island green in one. Those who do not make the putting ground in one usually give up, for the task of getting out of the deep rough in the hollow is about hopeless. The left of the green is guarded by three deep traps and a lone bunker, while traps guard the front approach and the right. The green is undulating. Fifteen yards were added to this hole during the spring, and some traps were added, in preparation for the open championships.

Hole 7—395 yards, par 4. Drive, mashie and two putts. Deep ravine in front of the tee menaces the drive. Heavy brush and woods mark the right of the fairway. A wide bunker and a series of traps cut into the fairway at 240 yards, with a similar hazard about 25 yards ahead. This gives the player but a narrow passageway to the green, which has a slight front slope, and is protected by four wide and deep sand pits.

Hole 8—253 yards, par 3. Full drive and two putts. A ditch cuts through the fairway and is paralleled by other ditches. The green approach is treacherous, guarded by the well known "Sahara" trap, 100 yards long and 25 feet wide. A series of traps and bunkers dot the right. The green is small, with a decided roll. The "Sahara" trap contains 450 tons of sand.

Hole 9—477 yards, par 5. The tee is in a valley, and the green at the top of a decided rise in front of the clubhouse. Two full wood shots, a chip and two putts required by the par players. The fairway is escorted to the green its entire length by raps

DAWES OPENS NEW HARBOR Vice President Christens First Private Harbor Built on Lake Michigan in Twenty Years.

Vice President
Charles G. Dawes.

Lighting Entrance to the Harbor.

The freighter, "T. W. Robinson," one of the world's largest self-unloading boats, discharging a cargo, was one of the features at the formal opening of Buffington Harbor, the first private harbor to be built on Lake Michigan in twenty years and one of only three private harbors on the Great Lakes.

Chicago, June 9.—Vice President Charles G. Dawes today raised the flag over Buffington Harbor, Indiana, thus signifying the formal opening to navigation of the first private harbor to be built on Lake Michigan in twenty years, and one of only three such harbors on the Great Lakes.

The new improvement adds impetus to the deep-waterway movement and the further enlargement of lake traffic, and enables the cement company to receive by boat and store large quantities of raw materials and to ship cement by water as well as by rail to all points on the Great Lakes and the Mississippi Valley.

Affleck, President of the Universal Portland Cement Company, and a number of other notables took part in the ceremonies.

This new deep-water harbor, located at the plant of the Universal company, is said to be one of the most modern on the Great Lakes, there being a large boat-unloading bridge, a million-ton storage yard for raw materials, an electrically operated conveyor nearly a mile long to carry material from dock to cement plant, and an all-concrete lighthouse with one of the brightest beacons on Lake Michigan.

The new improvement adds impetus to the deep-waterway movement and the further enlargement of lake traffic, and enables the cement company to receive by boat and store large quantities of raw materials and to ship cement by water as well as by rail to all points on the Great Lakes and the Mississippi Valley.

both sides, as well as bunkers, on both sides. Two deep traps guard the green approach. The green is exceptionally large, with a decided roll.

Hole 10—461 yards, par 4. Drive, long iron, two putts. Fairway advances to green on decided down slope, with a ditch cutting through near the green for pushed drives. Eight traps and ten bunkers dot the flanks. The green is wide and square, with a very slight roll. A heavy putt rolling off, finds either deep rough or a gully to the rear and bushes to the right.

Hole 11—395 yards, par 4. Drive, iron, two putts. Here is the spot where Bobby Jones won the national amateur title from his teammate, Watts Gunn, in 1925. The fairway rolls up hill 200 yards, slopes into a deep, treacherous ditch, and continues on the up grade to the green. The ditch comes in from the right and flanks practically all that side of the fairway. Bunkers and traps protect the left. Short approach shots find two deep traps in front of the green, which slants to the approach and is almost completely surrounded by high bunkers and sand pits.

Hole 12—621 yards, par 5. Drive, brassie, pitch, two putts. This is the longest hole on the course, and is dog-leg to the right. The fairway takes a right slant from the tee, then turns a bit more sharply before the green is found straight ahead. It is a gradual slope most of the way. Hooked drives find bunkers and traps on the left. The hole has a total of 20 traps and 30 bunkers. At the 260-yard mark, a chain of bunkers and traps cut into the fairway from the right, while 100 yards ahead is a similar hazard. A hill slants in from the left. The green is level and small, and is surrounded by traps.

Hole 13—164 yards, par 3. Mashie or mid-iron and two putts. The fairway is uncut, with heavy rough on both sides. The green, protected by pits, is narrow and the terrain tricky.

Hole 14—349 yards, par 4. Drive, long mashie, two putts. The tee is on the brow of a hill, with the fairway sloping all the way to the left. There is a decided roll to the left. Thirteen traps and five bunkers make the going hard. Four traps guard the wide, rolling green. A hill to the rear makes an overplayed second shot or put disastrous.

Hole 15—474 yards, par 4. Two full wood shots, two putts. A new green, constructed this spring, added 25 yards to the length of the hole. Two deep traps also were added. The fairway rises and then slopes before inclining to the green. Fifteen traps and 14 bunkers decorate the flanks. The green is raised, and has a slight roll.

Hole 16—234 yards, par 3. Long drive or fade-away with spoon, two putts. This hole is a new addition to the course, replacing a less hazardous hole. The tee is exceptionally high, and the fairway on the left circles a long, wide sand trap. Deep traps flank the green on the right, with traps and bunkers to the left. A gully in front of the green catches short tee shots. The green is elevated, with a roll to the left and the approach.

Hole 17—302 yards, par 4. Drive, pitch, two putts. The fairway is a dog-leg, veering to the left, with severe penalties for any attempt at a short cut. The fairway runs off to the right uphill and then turns gently left for the approach. A series of traps and bunkers cut in on the left to catch short drives. An invisible deep trap fronts the green, affording only a narrow entrance. Three other traps surround the green, which is small, with a rear roll, and a center indentation.

Hole 18—457 yards, par 4. Drive, long iron, two putts. The fairway on the "home" hole slopes some 300 yards from the tee, and then rises slightly to the green. A high, wide bunker stretches across mid-fairway, cutting off the approach. A total of 11 traps and 7 bunkers dot this hole with a ditch to the left and rough to the right. It is protected by two large, deep traps and bunkers on one side, a mound on the other and a sand pit in front, with a ditch and a flower bed in the rear.

Hole 19—349 yards, par 4. Drive, long mashie, two putts. The fairway is a dog-leg, veering to the left, with severe penalties for any attempt at a short cut. The fairway runs off to the right uphill and then turns gently left for the approach. A series of traps and bunkers cut in on the left to catch short drives. An invisible deep trap fronts the green, affording only a narrow entrance. Three other traps surround the green, which is small, with a rear roll, and a center indentation.

Hole 20—349 yards, par 4. Drive, long mashie, two putts. The fairway is a dog-leg, veering to the left, with severe penalties for any attempt at a short cut. LINDY A LESSON TO BOYS OF U. S. SAYS SCOUT HEAD

James E. West Cites His Courage and Life of Plucky

The extraordinary fine character, the sublime courage, the dazzling capabilities of Captain Charles A. Lindbergh, 25-year-old trans-Atlantic flyer, have gripped the wide world. What lessons are there in the Lindbergh story for the American boy?

James E. West, for 17 years chief executive of the Boy Scouts of America, tells in this article written especially for The Dixon Evening Telegraph and NEA Service, Read it to your boy. He sees that your boy reads it for himself!

BY JAMES E. WEST
Chief Boy Scout Executive
New York—I am sure every American boy will add a new character to his Hall of Fame on his side by side with such heroes as George Washington, Kit Carson and Daniel Boone. That new hero is—Charlie Lindbergh.

His success is the result of pure grit. A great many persons have overlooked the fact that Charlie—and I'm sure every boy would call him by that familiar first name instead of the serious "Mr. Lindbergh"—was able to make this historical trip solely through a boyhood of self-discipline.

If he had not lived a good clean life he would not have had the fine young body, the stamina, the nerve to make that long, gruelling flight. A Flesh and Blood Spark Plug Sure, he had a wonderful machine to fly, but don't forget that that human machine of his inside that ship was the flesh-and-blood spark plug behind it all.

Every American boy is a potential Charlie Lindbergh. He typifies the average boy even in this day of luxuries and modern conveniences. He has proved we are not a nation of soft-skinned goody-goodies. He has convinced the world that American boys and youths are true-hearted, sturdy little men, keen, intelligent, fearless, and kind.

Notice his attitude after his successful landing. It reflects that wholesome character that is widespread among the boys of the United States. The Scout motto is "Be Prepared." And Charlie certainly was prepared. Every boy should cultivate courage, confidence, self-reliance and politeness. Notice how Charlie generously tried to minimize his own personal part. He insists on recognition for those who designed his ship, those responsible for the instruments.

He Wasted No Time
I want to say to all you boys of America that you have a right to feel proud of Charlie's marvelous record; to feel that Charlie, like all of you should be doing now, has played the game according to the rules.

I want you boys to remember that Charlie wasted no time in doing what he set out to do. As soon as his ship was built, and he took careful pains to supervise its construction, he took it up for a few practice spins and then said he was ready. With sheer confidence in himself and his scientific friends he set out from San Diego and flew to St. Louis. Then he hopped off again for New York and set a cross-country record that should inspire older and wiser aviators.

The Finest Touch Of It All
While the nation called him "The Flying Fool," I want to insist he was far from a fool. He is a smart young man. Don't pay attention to the skeptics. If Charlie had listened to them telling him he hadn't a chance to make it across, he would never be where he is now. He went ahead in the face of everything because he had confidence and courage and not conceit.

To me the finest touch of the whole story is the story of his landing. Simple, straightforward Charlie! He typifies every American boy with these plain words: "Well, I made it. Please cable mother."

Speakers and the churches they will serve at the 10:45 meetings are: Presbyterian—Rev. Frank A. Gageby, pastor of the Beverly Hills St. Paul's Union Church, Chicago.

Bethel United Evangelical—Wm. V. Martin, Freeport, prominent business man, active worker in the Second Presbyterian Church, Freeport, and Past President of the Illinois C. E. Union.

SHELL GASOLINE

Sweeping On to the Forefront in Popular Favor

The NEW Shell... 400 "Extra Dry"... has scored a tremendous success from the start. Sales are rolling up... gaining momentum... breaking all records... as more and more motorists find that this fuel is just what they have been looking for.

A higher grade... more volatile... more powerful gasoline... at the price of the ordinary kind!

At one stroke (reducing the end point to 400°)... Shell made a revolutionary departure in gasoline refining... a change that immediately put Shell on a higher plane... in a class by itself... the greatest gasoline value on the market.

It's EXTRA DRY... which means it is unusually free from heavy, greasy, less volatile parts that deaden the action of the motor. It's purer, cleaner, finer, more powerful... and as a consequence, improves the performance of any car and adds immeasurably to the joy of driving.

It's easy to prove these facts for yourself. Wait till your tank is nearly empty... then fill it up with 400 "Extra Dry"... and note the difference.

Any Shell Yellow-red Service Station or Shell dealer is ready to supply you with this wonder gasoline at the regular price... not one cent extra for the extra quality it contains or the extra service it will render.

SYNOPSIS

Emmett Murtough, of Killanmaul, Ireland, emigrates to America and is followed by Sheila Kildare, to whom he is betrothed, and her father. Both men boast of what they are going to do but neither will hold a steady job. Sheila makes friends with the family of Rory O'Shea, a professional boxer, who falls in love with her. Murtough drives a truck for a band of bootleggers, is shot by hi-jackers and takes refuge with the Kildares.

CHAPTER VII—Continued

Old Tom put Emmett to bed in Sheila's room while she fixed a place on the parlor couch for herself. Her father always slept on a cot which was put up for him every night in the kitchen.

Murtough's wound was not as trivial as was first believed. He developed a high fever by that afternoon and required constant care and attention on the part of Old Tom by day and Sheila until far into the night. The helplessness of Murtough softened the heart of Sheila toward him. He was truly grateful and the gratitude that poured from his lips was like a return of the Emmett Kildare that Sheila had known when they were in their teens back in Killanmaul. Irish gallantries accompanied his thanks to her, spoken gently, and he seemed to lean upon her for strength to get well. The viciousness that had marked him after he began his association with the West End Club passed from him. He was not permitted to drink and Sheila believed that his former surliness must have been due to bad companions and liquor.

She had had no word from Rory O'Shea in six weeks and what with "Put these away for me, Sheila, darling," Emmett said one night as he handed her two invitation envelopes. "This our tickets for the grand dance that the club is going to hold."

"An' ye're taking me to it, Emmett?"

"Indeed an' indeed, an' ye'll be the prettiest girl there."

"Then I'll buy me a new dress with part of the money ye gave to father an' me, though truth to tell, as I've said before, ye're not owing us anything, an' I shouldn't have taken it."

"Buy a new dress an' shoes an' whatever, I don't know; just so ye look yer prettiest for the admiration of all my fellow club members."

Here was a new Emmett entirely, thought Sheila. Had she been always wrong, was he the good man her father had declared him to be?

On Monday Rory O'Shea was to fight Campeau. Saturday came and Sheila went out to do her marketing before reporting for duty at the restaurant. Old Kathie O'Shea was on the stoop reading a letter. She looked up as Sheila came out of the door.

"Sheila! An' it's a stranger ye've been," greeted Mrs. O'Shea. "Well, I'm working, ye know, an' work comes first."

"I've just a letter from Rory. His fight is on Monday night at the Garden."

"When will he be home?"

"Oh, he always goes straight to the hall from his training quarters. We'll not see him until after it's over. But there's a postscript I want to be reading to you." The old lady turned to the last page and adjusting her spectacles she read:

"Tell Miss Kildare I am hoping that she's holding a good wish for me. I know I have her good luck with me I'll win. I do, indeed, Mrs. O'Shea."

"Then I'll tell him so in the telegram I'm going to send to him tonight."

"Good luck!" There had not been much good luck for the Kildares, Sheila thought, since she had lost her shamrock charm. And, yet, it was true she had a job, and had not Emmett changed for the better? After all, a sturdy heart may be sad now and then and not always "a-singing."

CHAPTER VIII

Charlie's Big Boy Friend
The Brown and Malloy bout at the Garden sold a capacity house. These heavyweights were comers and the entire boxing fraternity and followers were anxious to see which of the two would pass on the next step forward to a match with the champion. According to all boxing precedent then Rory O'Shea had found a good spot for his battle with Campeau, the French lightweight. The match was the semi-final—a position on the card that every fighter prizes until he himself is partner of the main attraction.

Rory was in high spirits. He had trained hard and Jimmy Tree personally had supervised his work at the camp, giving good advice to Jack Reagan, Rory's manager. Not only that, Tree had offered, and Reagan had accepted, to sit in Rory's corner that night. Jimmy Tree had little love for the so-called "foreigners" who were being imported for the fight game. Tree had declared O'Shea to be trained to a hair, and with Rory's ring generalship which he had learned through ten hard years of fighting, it was conceded by all of the experts that Rory had a great chance. O'Shea's followers said that if Rory could stay seven rounds that he would whip the Frenchman.

After her meeting with Mrs. O'Shea, Sheila found herself listening to the comments of the patrons at Nick's Restaurant and when the Sunday paper was brought in by Old Tom Kildare she got the sporting section and her interest in the bout grew as she read what the fight experts wrote about Rory. His picture was there in his ring trunks and she admired the fine physique of this little fighting machine. "He has my wish for him to win," she whispered to herself as she laid the newspaper aside.

Murtough and Old Tom discussed the coming fight between Brown and Malloy in detail and they remarked the bout between O'Shea and Campeau, but there were no sneers for Rory.

"Do you think Mr. O'Shea will win, Emmett?" Sheila asked timidly, fearing her interest would arouse the former surly antagonism. Emmett surprised her.

"He's got a good chance the men at the club say; it is only that Campeau is a lot younger, about six years, I hear, an' they think that O'Shea can't wear him down."

Sheila was grateful for Emmett's generosity and she smiled at him.

"I hope he does for his mother's sake," she said.

MULE RESCUES PONY. Forsyth, Mo.—A spotted Shetland pony, excited by the rise of the White River, which had invaded its pasture, struck out for the center of the current, apparently with suicidal intent. Its pasture pal, a white mule, leaped in after the pony, struggled for half an hour to turn it toward shore, finally seized its mane and dragged it to land.

THIS HAS HAPPENED

LINCOLN NUNNALLY, elderly American chemist, is summoned to the little jungle-bordered town of PORTO VERDE, in west central Brazil, by his young friend, VILAK, who is concerned for the safety of his beautiful cousin, ELISE MARBERRY, owner of a coffee plantation and other property near Porto Verde.

Several mysterious deaths have occurred, including that of TONY BARKHRETTA, one of Elise's former, and the girl herself has received warnings to get out of the country.

Vilak, who poses at times as a barber and at others as ATTORNEY DAVIS, believes GAYLORD PRENTISS, a reluctant and forbidding man, known to be an enemy of Elise, may be involved some way in the deaths. Accordingly, Elise insists on joining them. Prentiss takes the dog on them and Vilak saves his companion's life by chloroforming it into unconsciousness.

Returning to Elise's plantation, they await the night. The next morning Vilak, in his barber shop, receives a note from Nunnally saying Elise's blood had become poisonous.

NOW BEGIN THE STORY CHAPTER XIII

VILAK crumpled the note into his pocket. "No answer," he said.

When the laborer had stepped outside the door, he closed and locked it behind him. Swiftly he wrote a note saying that the shop would not be opened until the next morning, then took his horse and rode quietly out of the town, fretting constantly because for the sake of appearances he could not urge his horse into a furious gallop.

When he had passed the outskirts, however, and knew he was no longer likely to be observed, he let the powerful animal have its rein. Stopping with a jerk before his house behind the trees, he leaped down, hurried inside, in a flash changed his suit, applied a bit of makeup to his face, took his other horse so that his mount as well as his clothes would be different and, once more the well-groomed Attorney Davis, sped up the road.

The tree-girded entrance of his cousin's fazenda loomed before him. He swept into it and down the drive. Elise, who had heard the hoofs of the oncoming horse, came running up to meet him. Her lustrous black eyes had become wan and drawn, the lids swelled with tears; her soft olive skin was pallid, her lips gray.

Vilak vaulted from his saddle. He took both her small hands in his own long thin ones with a depth of emotion seldom evident in his gaunt, mask-like face. "Thank God you're all right," he murmured. "What's the matter?"

She started to speak. Instead her thin lips moved feebly without uttering a sound; tears began streaming down her cheeks.

"Steady. Steady, Elise," he said quietly, gripping her hands tighter. Then, when her repressed sobs had ceased, went on: "Take your time. Whatever it is we'll straighten it out. What's happened?"

With her handkerchief she wiped the tears from the black circles under her eyes. "It's Tinky."

Vilak's massive brows contracted.

"Thank God you're all right," he murmured. "What's the matter?"

"The baby? . . . What's wrong with him?"

"He's gone . . . stolen." She began sobbing again. "What will we do? What will we do?"

"Steady. Steady, Elise." His voice was gentle, soothing. "We'll find him. Don't worry."

The chemist came hurrying down the path. His face, too, was drawn; worry was evident in his eyes behind their wide glasses. He looked at Vilak and shook his head. "Er . . . appalling," he said jerkily. "Appalling."

"Tell me about it. Elise is worn out."

"I don't know much . . . er . . . much. No one does. After breakfast Miss Marberry asked me to stay out here today . . . er . . . so that I could look at the mines this afternoon. I . . . was very glad to say that I would. . . . Er . . . very glad. . . . I read most of the morning. Found a book on Brazilian archeology. Most interesting . . . er . . . interesting. . . ."

Then he had lunch. One o'clock it was, I think . . . Yes, one o'clock . . . We had finished at one-thirty . . . Your cousin put the . . . er . . . baby . . . er . . . Tinky . . . out on the porch to get the sun. She and I went out for a few moments to look at her Brazilian roosters. Left the child in charge of the . . . er . . . nurse. Saw the roosters . . . very picturesque. In fifteen minutes we were back . . . The baby was gone . . . Disappeared like magic from its . . . er . . . bed . . . Nurse had gone in for a minute to get a glass of water . . . We ourselves . . . er . . . ourselves weren't away more than fifteen minutes . . . er . . . minutes . . . I looked at my watch . . . Appalling . . . er . . . appalling. . . ."

Elise's sobs had ceased. Vilak turned to her. "All right now?" he asked.

Her lips were still trembling. "It's my fault he is gone. Nobody's but mine. I'll never forgive myself. I should have kept watch over him. Then it wouldn't have happened. It wouldn't have happened."

"Don't talk that way, Elise. It's not your fault. It's mine far more than yours. Cheer up now. Like a good fellow. We'll find him. I promise you we'll find him."

He strode toward the house. "Nurse didn't see anyone? No signs of anyone having been about who might have taken him?"

"Some marks in the lawn in front of the veranda where the crib was. I'll show you."

"I'll look at the bed a minute first, if you don't mind."

She led the way inside. On the porch, near the screen from which the protecting blind had been lifted so that the sun could stream down, was an infant's crib of finely carved mahogany. On the shining linen pillow and the tiny white mattress was the unmistakable imprint of a child's body. Quickly Vilak's eyes ranged over the bed for a possible finger print. Then he glanced at the floor and in a moment stepped outside. In the soft turf was a series of deep circular marks which led from the doorway of the veranda to a strip of woods a hundred yards away.

"Foot prints," Vilak announced, studying them closely. "Foot prints of someone walking barefoot on his heels so as not to make any noise or leave more of a mark than he could help."

He began to follow the prints, striding quickly over grass and mud until he reached the strip of trees. Here, too, the prints, though not so prominent, were visible after close examination, and instead of being the prints of a foot, had become the impressions of a whole foot. By following these or, where they were missing, a crushed leaf or a branch which had been snapped in passing, Vilak at length reached the road, the others close behind him. Here the prints of feet disappeared entirely, to be replaced by the marks of horsehooves.

"There were two horses here," said Vilak, looking down intently at the ground. "There are two entirely different sets of prints. The animals were halted here some time, fifteen minutes at least. The number of prints as the horses stepped around shows that." He knelt. "Hum. That's odd. Look at that, Nanny." He pointed to an imprint clearly marked in the mud. "What does that look like to you?"

The old man stooped with difficulty. "Like an incomplete . . . er . . . horse hoof . . . Yes . . . incomplete. I can't see anything else."

"That's all it is. Just that. A shoe which was an inch shorter on one side than the other. It happens to be the shoe of Prentiss's horse. I noticed it on one of the rare days when he had ridden into town. Part of his left hind hoof was missing. An injury the animal got in an accident on Prentiss's fazenda. Jones told me." He looked up at Elise and smiled reassuringly. "Don't worry any longer. We've got the trail now. We'll have your Tinky back by midnight at the latest."

Their course, two sets of hoof-prints, one that of a horse whose left hind foot had been maimed, led clearly away from Porto Verde to Avilios, thirty kilometers up the river. Vilak mounted his horse again and waited while the others hastily obtained steeds and joined him. They set off as rapidly as the task of watching the prints in the ever changing road surface would permit.

"But why should . . . er . . . Prentiss . . . yes Prentiss, steal . . . er . . . Tinky?" the old man queried, as he awkwardly pulled at the reins of his horse.

Elise shuddered. "I don't know whether it is Prentiss. But it might be. He would do anything he could to hurt me. Anything. Because I am my father's daughter. Because he thinks I want to take his land. I hesitated to say it before. I thought I'd be descending to the level of the natives. But after day before yesterday when I went out to his house, I'm convinced that everything they say is true. I saw his face when he set the dog on me."

(To Be Continued)

In the next chapter Tinky is found, but why he was abducted to a great puzzle to Elise, Vilak and the old man.

OWLS WAR ON RATS. Washington—Cats, traps and poisons have failed to end the plague of rats that infest Lord Howe Island in the South Seas. The Australian government sent an expert to see what could be done to relieve the devoted inhabitants, who threatened to quit the island. The expert sent for two cases of California barn owls, most persistent of all enemies of rats.

DURAND PREACHER WILL PUSH SUITS IN SLANDER CASE

Rev. J. A. Warren Isn't Satisfied With Action of "Court"

When Rev. John A. Logan Warren, deposed pastor of the Durand M. E. church announced that he would prosecute his $50,000 slander suit against members of his congregation, he "staked his all" in an effort to clear his reputation and retain his place in the ministry, according to friends.

Rev. Mr. Warren was given a hearing two weeks ago before a jury of pastors, following charges of adultery filed by Miss Hazel Lamb, 29, Durand girl, who was employed as a domestic in his home.

Previous to the trial Dr. Warren filed suit against Judd Van Sickle, Albert Fritz, A. E. Swinson, Mrs. Sylvia Sodaman, Wallace Best and Edgar Best, members of his parish, charging them with slander.

Verdict "Misinterpreted."

Six pastors, Rev. Gilbert Stansell, Elgin, Rev. H. V. Holt, field representative of the M. E. theological school at Evanston; Rev. Fred Stone, pastor of Irving Park M. E. church, formerly of Dixon; Rev. E. K. Hester, Mt. Carroll; Rev. J. E. Robeson, Lena, and Rev. Milton Sterner Freeman, Marengo, sat as jurors at the trial, with Dr. C. E. Carpenter of Orangeville, district superintendent, presiding.

After hearing several witnesses a compromise was said to have been agreed upon, whereby the pastor was to withdraw his slander suit, take a "vacation" from his duties at Durand and present his case before the district conference next October.

The Rev. Quincy Wright, pastor of Centennial Church, Rockford, appearing as defense counsel, agreed to the verdict, but, according to a statement issued by Dr. Wright, the demands were misinterpreted by the defense and a refiling of the damage suit, even though it necessitated the temporary unrooking of the pastor, was decided upon as the only recourse in an effort to vindicate the pastor.

Plan Church Defense

Rev. Mr. Wright intends to continue in the capacity of counselor to the Durand pastor until after the conference.

Rev. Mr. Warren is quoted as saying that his "vacation" from duties at the Durand charge was not voluntary. This fact is said to have been instrumental in his arrival at a decision to renew the charges against members of his congregation.

Rev. Mr. Wright, who engaged in a long conference with Superintendent Crawford at Freeport Tuesday, also said that his interpretation of the original "compromise" was far from being in accord with that of the superintendent and jurors.

Parsonage Vacated.

Rev. and Mrs. Warren already have vacated the parsonage at Durand and are said to be staying with Rockford friends.

Dr. Crawford is to supply the Durand parish with a substitute pastor until the October conference, it was announced.

You can't look at a tire
and tell how far it will run

YOU CAN'T SEE a tire carcass because it is covered by the tread. Yet the way this carcass is built tells how far the tire will run.

Dunlop has had 39 years to learn all the hidden points where tires wear. Dunlop carcasses are built from the best long fibre cotton, spun in Dunlop's own mills into the famous Dunlop cable-twist cord.

These cords are elastic, so they give and take as your tire runs; strong, so they resist constant load and pounding. They build the best possible foundation for the Dunlop tread—the toughest rubber development known.

Thus Dunlop's extra years of experience build added value into every vital tire-part. That is why, not one Dunlop—but every Dunlop—gives you more service than you can reasonably expect.

AMUSEMENTS

"THE WILD WESTCOTTS"

There's a lot of fun in "The Wild Westcotts" at the Cort Theatre, Chicago. Mr. Frazee, producer of this comedy success, has provided this attraction with the cleverest bunch of youthful actors the season has crowded into one delightful entertainment. It is a peach of a show viewed from any point, with a flood of intelligent laughs and plenty of other reasons for urging the wise and the elegant to spend their money at the Cort Theatre box office. The show is uproariously funny, clever, clean as a whistle; it is a play that contains neither profanity nor dirt. Indeed, there is a certain informed innocence in "The Wild Westcotts" that bespeaks more intelligent sophistication than you will find in a half dozen wisecracking dramas of the night club and the pot-house.

Harry Frazee has brought to the Cort Theatre, Chicago, a flawless cast and it is predicted that this production will stay in the Cort Theatre till straw hats atale.

If the theatre's guests are after speed, brightness and lively comedy "The Wild Westcotts" is the play for their money.

Performances will be given every night, with matinees on Wednesday and Saturday. The management announces that there will be no increase in the usual popular scale of prices that prevail at the Cort Theatre.
